

Update Bulletin

Bellamy: Man in Motion...

February 11, 2002

Ah Valentine's Day – the perfect day to lie back, relax, smell the roses, eat the chocolate, pack up and move offices and – for you, yes – reprogram your FAX machine.

You see, our still-peerless Order Entry Manager for StoreNext Dealers, the good Mr. John Bellamy, is acquiring new and sumptuous offices at Fujitsu's new headquarters in Frisco, Texas. And completing the décor, Mr. Bellamy will equip his digs with his famously massive 256-ream FAX machine (in fact the subject of its own September 1997 Bulletin).

But know ye that although the estimable Mr. Bellamy has (once more) prevailed upon circumstances in order to preserve this magnificent electronic contrivance for his own individual use, his exalted status nonetheless was somehow insufficiently persuasive to Southwestern Bell, which insisted – against all human decency – to divorce poor John from the vociferation-oriented communication lines to which he has been wedded for many, many years – and on Valentine's Day, no less.

And as any counselor will tell you, good communications is the foundation of any successful marriage. So the cruel irony befalling Mr. Bellamy must not be lost upon your own electromechanical facsimile device – as it has undoubtedly carried on and long and satisfying relationship with Mr. B.'s magnificently compatible equipment. Since it is, without a doubt, the single most important number at StoreNext, it is essential that your own infatuated engines be informed, in order that their incessant and besotted long-distance love affair with John's device can continue with their abounding flow of uninterrupted receipts.

Thus, to provide Mr. Bellamy with future facsimiles, your machines will be grateful for your informing them that Mr. Bellamy's apparatus will be standing by at 972-963-2637.

Also, of course, John himself is no slouch at phone. Whether slow-hand or speed-dial, know that successful contact will henceforth require a new telephonic address – to wit, 972-963-2420.

All current and future Valentines can be mailed to:

Fujitsu Transaction Solutions Inc.
2801 Network Boulevard
Frisco, Texas 75034

To Your Success,
